

METHOD AND APPARATUS FOR DELIVERY OF DATA OVER A NETWORK

Abstract of Disclosure

A data delivery system for communicating sophisticated information between a first and second computer over a network, such as the Internet. The delivery system resides on a network server and will receive information stored in a source file, translate the data, and deliver the data package that allows a recipient to use the sophisticated information without requiring the recipient to use software compatible with the source file.